MRS. CRAWFORD DIED AS HUSBAND WENT TO JAIL

PROBE DEATH OF SUIT CASE PRISONER'S WIFE

Mrs. Rose Crawford, wife of man who confesses suit case crime.

Mrs. Crawford was a director and one of the owners of the "Jane E. Bishop Company," in whose place it is alleged Susan Geary, the suit case victim, met her death.

Medical Examiner West Will Investigate New Mystery in Connection With Tragedy of Susan Geary—Cause of Woman's Illness Not Fully Explained.

By a strange irony of fate, Mrs. Rose Crawford, the handsome wife of Lewis W. Crawford, died at the home of her foster mother, Mrs. Jane Bishop, following a surgical operation, while her husband was in the toils of the law, charged with complicity in the death of Susan Agnes Geary, the pretty dancer, whose death was the result of illegal treatment received in the office formerly run by Mrs. Bishop.

Whether the treatment received by Mrs. Crawford was criminal has not been determined. An autopsy will be held to ascertain this fact. Facts have been laid before the medical examiner that have caused him to take this step.

Medical Examiner Francis West of Newton Centre said to-day to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"We shall hold an autopsy some time to-day. I cannot name the hour. As to the history of the illness of Mrs. Crawford, I can only say that upon advices laid before me I have decided to investigate. I cannot tell you more until the autopsy.

Mrs. Louis Crawford has been ill for

DEPEW NEAR COLLAPSE ON INSURANCE RACK

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Trembling and on the verge of collapse, United States Senator Chauncey M. Depew gave sensational testimony that hinted at big graft to the legislative committee investigating the big New York insurance companies.

When pressed for answers to very pertinent questions by Counsel Hughes of the committee, he fidgeted in his seat, paled and in a hardly audible voice replied that he "did not recollect," that his "memory was faulty." He was about to break down completely when Mr. Hughes excused him.

Senator Turns Pale.

The matter which caused the Senator to lose his self-control was with reference to two letters addressed to him and signed by John A. Nichols. They clearly indicated that there was a big "graft" connected with some deals by the Equitable, of which Mr. Depew was a director at the time the letters were written.

One of the letters was:

> New York, Dec. 19, 1896.
> My Dear Depew—My friend who usually gets around at this time of the year has written me several letters to which I have not replied. He now writes that he will be here Monday or Tuesday, and desires to have me help him as usual. What shall I do? Faithfully yours,
>
> JOHN A. NICHOLS.

Another read:

> New York, Dec. 24, 1900.
>
> My Dear Senator—Our friend up the river has been very cantankerous of late and wants to know, you know. Don't care a hang, etc., etc. As soon as you can conveniently say, will you conveniently do so?
>
> Wishing you all the good things of life in this holiday season, I am, as ever, yours, JOHN A. NICHOLS.

When the Senator took this letter in his hand he paled perceptibly. His hand shook and the ruddy flush that usually marks his face disappeared.

"Do you know the man referred to in these letters?" asked Mr. Hughes.

"Does Not Recall."

"I do not recall his name; no,' stammered Senator Depew, in reply.

"Is the man mentioned in those two letters the same person?"

"They refer to the same person.'

It was here that Mr. Hughes excused Mr. Depew. The letters referred very plainly to some person who was dangerous to the Equitable Society and who had to be bought off.

The session abounded in startling disclosures. One occurred when Samuel S. McCurdy of the Equitable, who says he is no relation to the McCurdys of the New York Mutual, took the stand. In handling some papers Mr. Hughes came across a business card, to which was attached a voucher. On the reverse of the card was a pencilled message. Mr. Hughes was apparently unprepared for the situation that presented itself when he came across the voucher, and he hesitated a moment before addressing Mr. McCurdy.

"Do you know anything about this voucher?" he asked McCurdy.

Mr. McCurdy replied that he did not know why the money had been paid, and said he was not acquainted with the transaction the voucher represented.

Set Matter Aside.

Stepping to the rail behind which the committee sat Mr. Hughes said:

"I have always known this man as one of high character, and I don't want to blast his reputation without justification. I think I will lay this aside for the time being."

Vouchers were produced showing that at five different times John A. Nichols, who is a New York attorney, received checks of $1,000 each for "professional services." The insurance commissioner of a Western State received $42,000 from the Equitable. David B. Hill was shown to be on the salary list of the Equitable, and a letter from him, thanking the Equitable for the money, was read. The firm of Tracey, Boardman & Platt, of which Senator Platt is a member, was credited with having received $15,000 from the Equitable.

Husted Long on Payroll.

Mr. Hughes endeavored to ascertain why Thomas D. Husted was receiving money from the Equitable. According to Mr. Mc-

AMERICANS FLEE FROM ST. PETERSBURG

One-Half of the Colony, Fearing the Worst, Has Already Left the City.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—About half the members of the American colony have left St. Petersburg, a telegram reports, and others are going. Many of the English and German colonies have disappeared, and the exodus of foreigners who have resided here but fear to remain this Winter continues.

Most are going by way of Finland, as all accommodations are engaged on steamers scheduled to leave here before ice will close navigation—about ten days. The fare to Stettin, Prussia, which usually is $12, has been raised $100.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Mail reports:

"Vessels leaving St. Petersburg have every berth full. Babies are charged full fare, and the smoke rooms, etc., are turned into improvised bivouacs. Some lines have raised the fares to triple and quadruple the normal prices. The River Neva is alarmingly low. Several deep draught vessels are aground."

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Standard, telegraphing at midnight, says:

"The demand to end the strike Monday is becoming imperative, and the matter will be referred to district meetings tomorrow. The extremists strenuously resist the proposition."

The Morning Post correspondent corroborates this and adds: "The pressure to terminate the strike comes from the work people themselves."

ASSESSED TOO MUCH; MILLIONAIRE MOVES

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 18.—E. R. Thomas, who not very long ago became a citizen of Newport, has withdrawn his citizenship and will take up his residence elsewhere.

This action on the part of Mr. Thomas is thought to be due to the fact of the increase in his personal taxes, he being taxed here for $500,000.

New Haven will not have a monopoly on the good football games this afternoon, for out on Soldiers Field 30,000 enthusiasts will see Harvard and Dartmouth fighting it out in what promises to be a battle royal, and what is undoubtedly the second best gridiron fight of the year from a strictly New England point of view.

Two years ago the eleven from Hanover came to Soldiers Field, and, after playing one of the best games of football ever shown there, returned to New Hampshire with a Crimson scalp dangling at her belt and a 12 to 0 victory to their credit. Last Fall Dartmouth again came to town, but this time they did no better than tie Harvard. This is the correct manner in which to chronicle last year's game, for Harvard was thankful to escape without a defeat.

Dartmouth Hopes to Repeat.

To-day Dartmouth is inside the Stadium again and hopes to do what it did two years ago. Captain Hurley and his band of ten sturdy followers are there to stop it. The result is going to be a very lively set-to, if any one should ask you.

Dartmouth men are asking odds of from 10 to 8 to 10 to 9 on their team, and are being accommodated, for the most part at the latter figure. When it is remembered that Dartmouth defeated Princeton two weeks ago to the tune of 6 to 0, and since it can't be forgotten that Pennsylvania beat Harvard last week, 12 to 6, even money on the game would seem to be a fairer proposition. The fact that they are playing on their own grounds undoubtedly is influencing the Harvard supporters in giving odds.

Harvard Will Cheer Team.

Harvard is going to get her vocal apparatus into order this afternoon for the Yale game, and incidentally to meet the flood of cheering and singing that Dartmouth is sure to turn loose. A thousand Dartmouth men will sit together back of the Dartmouth team and cheer as only Dartmouth men can, with their pet screech yell. Harvard will have a band on hand and the new song, "On Soldiers' Field," that has made such a hit recently, will be tried out. This, with the old favorites, will give Harvard an excellent chance to cheer their team royally.

According to reports from the Dartmouth camp, Captain Main will not be able to line up against Harvard. Neither will Harvard be able to put in her strongest team against the Hanoverians. Left guard Burr has been out all week with a cold and is not yet fit to get into the game. Starr and Foster, who were both thoroughly banged up in the Penn game, will be kept out as precautionary methods. White will

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 18.—Fluttering banners of the blue of Old Eli are entwined with streamers of the orange and black in the Elm City, which slept last night restlessly amid the general racket evoked by the opening game of the championship football campaign. Parading the Yale campus and the New Haven streets the advance guard of the Tiger invaders sociably locked arms with Yale revellers, enacting the preliminary scenes of the annual Yale-Princeton football game.

Least concerned of all, the gridiron giants, who will clash in two hours of strenuous agony to-day, slept far removed from the din of the revelry, the babel of betting and the frenzy of athletic enthusiasm.

By all the signs of the law and the football prophets Yale is scheduled the winner of the yearly gridiron clash. It is the thirtieth annual gathering of the rival football clans, and Yale is far in the majority of victories, with seventeen chalked up. Eight were Princeton celebrations and four went to a tie.

All kinds and conditions of coin went into stakeholders' vaults here, but Yale supplied two-thirds of the hard stuff. Shorter odds than 2 to 1 were impossible. Even money that the Tigers would not score was deposited often in the half-crazed partisanship of the Yale devotees, as the frenzied desire to put the Princeton rooters in a hole grew with the evening glee.

"Big Hoch" Loses Place.

Picking the eleven occupied the attention of Yale's coaches until late yesterday afternoon, for until the eve of battle four places on the team were undecided. Even at the last minute a small revolution swept from his throne in the Yale line Hockenburger, the Billy Bounce of the team. His 218 pounds have not been handled at left guard so cleverly as Substitute Arthur Erwin handled his team in secret practice this week. The latter showed that he can handle his even 200 avoirdupois with ease, and the decree, "Back to the side lines," reached Hockenburger almost on the dawn of success in his long fight for a place on the team.

No less sensational was the struggle to make over the entire back field displacing Left Halfback Paul Veeder and Fullback Flinn. They are down on their form through recent injuries and their advocates admitted that their closer rivals, Roome and Levine, have distanced them in effectiveness the past week. For the sake of unity in action and team play, pleaders for a change withdrew their objections, and it was finally ordained to hang Yale's hope of winning on the trio which has swept the battle line in all the early games, and the chance of the newcomers for winning a "Y" rests upon the failure of Veeder and Flinn to make good in the first half.

Jones a Spectator.

Princeton presents her most formidable aggregation without exception, but the star of the Yale team, Tad Jones, must enjoy the game from the side lines. Without a rival in playing skill, except Eckersall of Chicago, Freshman Jones, a temporary cripple, is destined to the humiliation of watching instead of fighting to-morrow.

The verdict of the coaches in his case was that the only chance for Jones to play lay in a situation so [illegible] for Yale that it seems impossib[illegible] win without him.

"If Yale is unable to sc[illegible] Princeton is driving her down the fi[illegible] may be sent into the play late in [illegible] second half as a last resort," said a lea[illegible] the s[illegible], "but we hope to be able to win w[illegible] him, for we realize that we take a chance in playing him in his unfit condition. We want to save him for the Harvard game next week."

Yale's eleven was taken to the field yesterday afternoon more for general exercise than anything else. There was a little signal drill, but no scrimmaging, and the players leaped frisky as kittens over the chalk marks. A few words of caution by the coaches anent the new formation completed the session.

The coaches think that the contest will prove much closer than the betting indicates. Head Coach Jack Owsley said to-night: "Yale hopes to win, but we look for a battle royal. All our men are in first class condition."

Captain Tom Shevlin said: "I do not dare to predict victory, and I feel that if we are able to pull out ahead it will be by a mighty small margin."

Wholesale respect for the Tigers' uphill fighting ability is felt at Yale. Two years ago, with Yale leading 6 to 0, Captain De Witt of Princeton grabbed the ball on a fumble, and raced the length of the field for a touchdown, tieing the score, and five minutes later scored a place kick that won the game, 11 to 6. Six years ago with a single minute play, Yale leading 10 to 6, Johnny Poe of Tigertown dropped a field goal between the Yale posts and won, 11 to 10.

play guard in the place of Burr; Leonard will be at left half, in Foster's place, and at the same time do the punting, and Newhall will be at quarter. The latter has just got back into the game again this week after an absence of three weeks. It is very fortunate that Newhall is able to go in to-day, for there is nobody else on the squad at Cambridge capable of filling Starr's place.

Knowlton at Right End.

Dan Knowlton will play right end for Harvard for the first time in his career, and there is great interest being displayed as to how he will fit there. If he can learn the duties of his new position he should greatly strengthen the Cambridge outfit. With White at left guard and Knowlton at right end, the Harvard line will be heavyweight indeed, the line from end to end averaging 201 pounds.

Play will be called at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Bulletins will be run from the Yale field telling of the Yale-Princeton game.

Coach Reid broke away from custom yesterday afternoon and did not give his men any work whatsoever. They did not even put on their togs, but were taken for a long automobile ride. The only work done on Soldiers Field yesterday was a signal drill for some of the substitutes. It is a long time since a whole Harvard eleven has gone for a whole work day in the football season without a stroke of work. Coach Reid must think his men are down pretty fine when he resorts to such unusual methods as this.

PROBE DEATH OF CRAWFORD'S WIFE

some time. She was said to be dying three weeks ago from a complication of ailments, in which tuberculosis of the throat played an important part. Peritonitis was also mentioned in connection with her illness.

A relative, Miss Tennien of Waltham, attended her in Mrs. Crawford's own home in West Newton. Miss Tennien is a vocal teacher. Mrs. Crawford and she were close friends. Miss Tennien told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter two weeks ago that Mrs. Crawford had been operated upon for tuberculosis by Dr. Chadwick of Waltham.

Mr. Bishop told the authorities that Mrs. Crawford had been treated by Dr. Chadwick of Waltham. Dr. Chadwick said that he had operated on the woman for peritonitis following tuberculosis, in the hope of saving her life. Medical Examiner West will make a report on the case to-day or Monday.

Crawford learned of his wife's death while he was waiting in the detention room, after he and Hunt had been held in $25,000 bonds, which they were unable to furnish. A newsboy with the afternoon papers passed through the room and Crawford saw from the headlines on a copy of the BOSTON AMERICAN that his wife was dead. He was overcome for a few minutes and rested his head on his arms after speaking to Hunt for a minute. Soon, however, he regained his composure, and when he was taken to the Charles street jail for the night he appeared as if nothing unusual had happened.

When the two men who have confessed to having thrown the two suit cases and the satchel containing the body, arms and legs and the head of Susan Geary into Boston Harbor were asked to plead to the indictment against them both pleaded not guilty. Assistant District Attorney [illegible], representing the State, asked the court to fix the bail of each of the men at $25,000, the same bail required of Dr. Percy de Mille McLeod. This was done. The men were not represented by counsel, but both asked to be permitted to consult an attorney before making their pleas. Being unable to raise the bonds required, they were committed to jail.

The police are following up every possible trace of Mrs. Mary Dean, who conducted the house on Winthrop street, Roxbury, where Susan Geary died, and where her body was cut up and packed in the suit cases, and who is accused in the later confessions of Crawford and Hunt with having been the one who performed the original operation on the girl which resulted in her death.

In this connection they have learned that Mrs. Dean's seventeen-year-old daughter, Mary O'Brien, is still a pupil at the Academy of Notre Dame, West Roxbury, and is living with her grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah F. O'Brien, at No. 41 Harvard street, Brookline. She has lived with her father's parents for twelve years, and so far as the police can learn neither the O'Briens nor the daughter have had anything to do with Mrs. Dean since her later marriage.

The police interviewed Mrs. Nellie Geary yesterday at Whitman, where she is working for Mrs. B. F. Littlefield at No. 416 South avenue. Mrs. Geary has no connection with the family of Susan Geary, but she was at one time employed by Mrs. "Dr." Bishop at the latter's home in West Newton. It was in the hope of getting some trace of Mrs. Dean that the police saw Mrs. Geary. She was, however, able to give them no information, as she had never known the Dean woman.

From Mrs. Geary they learned the name of a Mrs. Agnes Shaw, supposed to be employed in a restaurant at Brockton, who at one time had some connection with the Bishop place. Search was at once begun in Brockton for this woman, but as yet she has not been located.

In the crusade against the malpractitioners which has been one of the results of the death of Susan Geary, the police are now getting ready for raids on the "hospitals" connected with the murder dens, similar to those that have already been made upon the offices. The authorities hope to get tangible evidence in the raids on the "hospitals," and in the meantime they are closely watching all the suspected places.

"We will start in on the 'hospitals' connected with these shops just as soon as arrangements can be made," said Judge Emmons. "These places usually are located some distance away from the main office and it has taken some time to locate them. We hope to get good results when these are raided."

Two of these hospitals are situated, it is understood, in the South End, in Captain O'Lalor's division. The captain has been given orders to get after them at once. For several days plain clothes men have been watching them.

CRAWFORD'S LOVE FOR HIS DEAD WIFE; "MY DARLING MAME"

"My Darling Mame" is the term of endearment which Louis W. Crawford, alleged accessory to the dark crime which caused the death of Susan Geary, applied to his wife, yesterday, when she lay dying, and her husband stood in the prisoner's dock, accused of one of the most shocking deeds which ever mystified police and public.

"God knows how I trust and pray that she is all right," Crawford wrote when a shrinking, terrified fugitive.

To-day he was but a few miles from the bedside of the woman he loved so well, but he could not visit her. There was no friend to furnish $25,000 in bonds for him.

"This is the worst part of it all—and it is all hard enough to bear," said Crawford.

His wife was the daughter of "Mrs. Bishop," a name made notorious by a medical den. Several weeks since Mrs. Crawford submitted to an operation to relieve a throat trouble. She was suffering when her husband fled to New York from the police. Tracked down at last, he was searched and in his pocket was found a letter to his wife, which he had not had time nor chance, so closely was he tracked, to mail.

Although the police believed Crawford guilty of an abhorrent crime, their hearts were touched when they read this letter. For a moment it staggered them. "Could a man," they asked of each other, "who wrote such a letter be so hardened as to drop the dismembered body of that poor dancing girl into Boston harbor?"

But the evidence was strong. They made Crawford a prisoner. The letter which touched their hearts shows Crawford, if what the police say is true, to be a man with a softer side than the indictment against him would indicate.

"Where is Louis? Where is my husband?" asked his wife, feebly, with the death damp on her brow. What would she not have given for the letter which never came, but which said:

"Oh, Mame, darling, take care of yourself and get well and strong again!

"I love you with all my heart and soul. God knows how I trust and pray that you are all right!"

Mrs. Crawford, her friends say, found her husband's absence her greatest cross in her terrible illness.

Last night he sat sleepless in his cell, thinking, thinking, thinking of his dead wife—of "My Darling Mame!"

QUINCY, Nov. 18.—Mayor Thompson has received a letter from President Sullivan of the Old Colony Street Railway Company, saying that an understanding had been reached between the officials of that company and the officials of the Boston Elevated Company with relation to through car service between Quincy and the Dudley street elevated station. BANK EXAMINER OF N. H. RESIGNS

WARNER, N. H., Nov. 18.—Edward H. Carroll, national bank examiner, has given his resignation, through Senator Jacob H. The resignation was entirely voluntary and was made for business reasons solely, in order that he might devote more time to private affairs.

"I propose to raise the question of the present immoral and godless condition of things in Boston. I refer to the glaring accounts of awful and hideous sin that are to-day publishing Boston all over the country in crimson colors"—Rev. L. G. Broughton, D.D.

"IF CHRIST SHOULD COME TO BOSTON" THERE'D BE LESS CRIME AND CULTURE

Dr. Broughton Says Christ Would Put an End to Crime, Graft and Bad Government.

If Christ should come to Boston he would put an end to the conditions which permit such things as the "suit case" crime, political "graft," and corrupt government, accordingt to the Rev. L. G. Broughton, D. D., of Atlanta.

These are striking samples of the evils which Dr. Broughton sees related in the Boston newspapers and on which he will speak in his sermon in Tremont Temple to-morrow afternoon on the subject: "If Christ should come to Boston." The sermon will be at 3:30 and a large attendance is looked for.

Dr. Broughton, the tall, lean Southerner who has been drawing hundreds of working people to his noon-day meetings in Tremont Temple, says:

"I propose to raise the question of the present immoral and godless condition of things in Boston. I refer to the glaring accounts of awful and hideous sin that are to-day publishing Boston all over the country in crimson colors."

Dr. Broughton said this while talking in his room at the Parker House with a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter concerning his Sunday sermon and its striking title.

Was Born In a Log Cabin.

Dr. Broughton is as limber as he is lean. He sat back in an arm chair, threw a leg over the arm of the chair, drew the other leg up toward his body, holding it there by grasping the ankle, and seemed as comfortable as a man could be.

He talked with the soft, drawling voice of the Southerner. He is a Carolinan and was born in a log cabin, twelve miles from the nearest railroad. That was forty years ago. To-day he is pastor of the Atlanta Tabernacle, a powerful church, which spends about $70,000 a year in the maintenance of its various departments.

This man, educated through great personal struggles, points an accusing finger at cultured Boston, saying:

"All I need to say is what Boston newspapers have said about Boston and what her public men have said."

A slender forefinger was pointed at the reporter. "If one-half of what they say is true, then Boston must devote less attention to culture and turn to something else—to the essentials."

In the very next breath he added:

"I like Boston, though. I like the energy and activity here. Boston is a broad field of operation, too, for religious work. I like the New England type of life. But Boston does stand out at present in an unenviable light.

"Boston Should Devote Less Attention to Culture and More to the Essentials of Life."

"I shall point out the astounding and yet Scriptural fact of Christ's personal coming back to earth. When he comes it will be for judgment and for reign. At this coming Boston will share its fate in the balance of His judgment. This coming may be imminent. I thing it is."

World in Its Evening.

"Well, possibly not in your life, Doctor?"

"No, not right off, maybe. Yet I think the world is in its evening. How long that evening will be no one knows, yet not so long as the day that has passed."

"When you speak of 'hideous sin' do you refer to the so-called 'suit-case' murder?"

"Yes, to that and to other things."

"To political conditions?"

"Yes. I have read the papers during the campaign. The political situation in Boston is rot"—and the accent was most emphatically on the "rot."

"Under the reign of Christ Boston will have a pure government."

NURSE TRIES TO KILL HERSELF

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Miss Eleanor Liddle, a trained nurse, who came from Pittsfield, Mass., made a mysterious and desperate attempt to kill herself by asphyxiation in a boarding house at No. 10 West Ninety-fourth street.

About three weeks ago she hired the most expensive rooms in the house. She had an abundance of fine clothes, and appeared to be plentifully supplied with money. Miss Liddle had little or nothing to say to the other boarders.

When the maid tried to open the door it was locked. She stooped down to peep through the keyhole, and found that it was stuffed with paper.

The room was broken into and a gas jet was found turned on. An ambulance hurried with the young woman to the J. Hood Wright Hospital. It was said that her condition is critical.

Miss Liddle left several notes. One of them was unsealed and begged the proprietor's pardon for the annoyance she might cause him. Another note asked that her body be sent to her parents at Pittsfield, Mass. The address of a judge then followed. The police decided to suppress the name of the judge until the question of the death or life of the woman was decided. At the hospital she regained consciousness several times, but refused to tell why she had attempted to kill herself.

HINDOO ORPHAN CANNOT LAND

Indian Girl Brought Here for Education in Mutes' School Is Detained.

Mooktie Wood, the little Hindoo deaf and dumb girl who arrived here last Monday on the White Star line steamship Canopic, cannot be permitted to land, and will have to go back to India, according to an immigration bureau ruling.

It is believed that when the appeal is taken to Washington, which will be done immediately, the decision of the inspectors here will be reversed.

The little girl lost both her parents several years ago. Then the girl, who is deaf and dumb, was taken in charge by Miss Sprague, head of the Pentacostal mission.

The story of the little orphan was published in an American missionary paper, which was read by Charles Myles of Pittsburg, who interested several members of the Baptist Church in the case. They decided to write to Miss Sprague to send the child to this country, with the idea of educating her at the Edmands School for the Deaf and Dumb at Pittsburg.

The child was sent here in charge of Mr. Burgess, a missionary, and Mr. Myles came here yesterday to take the girl back with him to Pittsburg. He was amazed when he was informed that she could not land. He said the girl was to be given an education that would fit her to return to her own country and teach in the school for deaf mutes.

The reason given for not permitting the child to land was that she had been an inmate of a charitable institution in India.

Mooktie will be held at the detention station at Long wharf, pending the result of the appeal.

LOSE HOPE FOR MARY ROGERS

RUTLAND, Vt., Nov. 18.—That Mary Rogers will be hanged seems to be regarded here as almost certain. Judge F. M. Butler, who, with his partner, Attorney T. W. Moloney, has fought one of the most noteworthy legal battles for a life in the history of Vermont, said:

"As far as we are concerned, we are through with the case. The United States Supreme Court has taken a recess until the 27th, and if the writ of habeas corpus is not granted, nothing further can be done."

SHALL STEAM RAILROADS GET STREET LINES?

Public Franchise League Arousing General Discussion of the Subject.

Whether steam railroads are to be allowed to acquire control of street railways is a question which promises to create much debate during the next session of the State Legislature. In the meantime the Public Franchise League is endeavoring to arouse a thoroughgoing public discussion of the subject. Among the men who have given much thought on the matter, and who by reason of his experience with electric interurban railways of the middle West may be regarded as an authority, is Howard C. Forbes of Boston, an electrical engineer.

Mr. Forbes has recently written a booklet on the subject which he calls "Public Safety and the Interurban Road vs. The Railroad Monopoly in Massachusetts," in which he takes the position that high-speed electric railroads will give the people rapid transit to greater distances, and that high-speed interurban railways, properly built, are safe.

Artificial Conditions.

"It is now some years since I began to feel that the railway laws of Massachusetts were not the great public boon they were supposed to be," says Mr. Forbes. "As electric railways have developed I have been more and more impressed with the artificial conditions which these laws have produced and with their general detriment to the best public interests. My proposition is simple. We want in the further development of our railways public safety, rapid transit and progress.

"The realization of such obvious public benefits is simply a question of proper laws which will encourage the natural development in electric transportation—the interurban railway.

"To make it clear that the possibilities for public safety, rapid transit and progress are greater on the interurban road than on the steam roilroads or on the street railways, I have but to direct your attention to a few obvious considerations.

Free From Accidents.

"The interurban railway, properly constructed on private land, away from the travel of the street, will be free from a large class of street accidents. On private right of way the tracks need not follow our crooked streets, and hence can run with fewer curves. This should eliminate a large class of collisions, due to blind curves. The tracks of the interurban road can be kept straighter than those of steam railroads. Then again, on the interurban roads there would be no need for grade crossings, of which there are now 1,900 in Massachusetts.

"I contend that an interurban law must be based upon railroad conception rather than upon the street railway conception; that unless this is done you cannot secure public safety and rapid transit, and you will place an artificial retraint upon the natural trend of progress in electric transportation. A general law for interurban railways should be similar to the present railroad law."

FITZGERALD GIVES PRAISE TO DONOVAN

Predicts His Own Election As Mayor of Boston By 17,000 Plurality.

PARTY UNDIVIDED, HE SAYS

John F. Fitzgerald, candidate for the mayoralty on the Democratic ticket, predicts in the Republic, a weekly periodical published and edited by Mr. Fitzgerald, that the party nominee will be elected by 17,000 plurality.

Mr. Fitzgerald pays a warm tribute to the loyalty and square conduct of the defeated candidate, Hon. Edward J. Donovan.

"Get Together"—Party's Duty.

The Republic says:

"The primary election is over and the Democratic voters have made their choice. It is now the duty of the men who fought each other in fair and decent rivalry in the primaries to get together and battle against the common enemy in December. The letter of sincere and cordial congratulation which the Hon. Edward J. Donovan sent immediately to the Hon. John F. Fitzgerald upon the receipt of the final figures of the caucus results of the final figures of the caucus results shows that he is loyal, even as his very opponents have always insisted that he would be, to the Democratic party. His attitude is characteristic of the man.

"The Hon. Edward J. Donovan has fought a good fight, and he has lost, but in the losing he has sacrificed nothing of the reputation for fair dealing and square conduct, which have endeared him to his supporters. His earnest and loyal advocacy of the nominee of the Democratic primaries means nothing more nor less than the triumphant election of John F. Fitzgerald for mayor by a majority as large as that of the Hon. Charles W. Bartlett—17,000 votes.

Ranks Still Undivided.

"There is no division in the Democratic ranks. The host of loyal and enthusiastic Democrats will march to the polls as a solid phalanx. It has been said that factional strife before caucuses of the Democratic party is alawys a significant augury or prophecy of party unity and zeal upon election day.

"In the household of the faith, dissension prior to the caucus does not mean division at the polls."

Curdy, Husted had been on the payroll for about five years, until 1900. The witness said there are no records of legal proceedings in which Husted was engaged.

Mr. Hughes later read the following memorandum, in the handwriting of J. W. Alexander.

> Mr. Jordan—Please send check for same amount as last year, $1,000, to Mr. Husted, brother of the Asemblyman, for professional services.

James W. Husted was speaker of the Assembly for several years and was known as "The Bald Eagle of Westchester."

It has developed that the State Commissioner of Insurance of a Western State had received $42,000 from the Equitable, Mutual and New York Life, the voucher showing the payment of $14,000 by the Equitable. It was stated that in this case the commissioner had asked for $100,000 and had been paid very nearly that sum, directly and indirectly.

His brother was paid $3,000 a year by each company, for three years, until the end of the official's term. The names of several of the most reputable lawyers in the State were mentioned in a manner to call for something in the way of verification before the statements already made can be construed, as it was evident they were intended to be construed.

The insurance commissioner named was accused of blackmailing the Equitable with the assistance of one of the most prominent and respected members of the bar in the State. Mr. McCurdy stated that these payments were made to avoid complying with demands that would have caused the company to expend much greater sums. A list of all policy-holders was demanded, he testified, with such explanations in each case as would have brought the cost of this work alone to $40,000.

Gage E. Tarbell was the last witness called before adjournment. He knew nothing of the "yellow dog" funds, nor of the manner in which money was provided for them. Mr. Tarbell did tell of his efforts to bring the Mutual, the New York Life, the Metropolitan and the Equitable into a combine by which these companies could be safeguarded against blackmail legislation.

LOVE FLAMED AFRESH WHEN SWEETHEART WAS LED TO JAIL

MISS KATHERINE WATKINS.

Pretty Katherine Watkins Sorry She Testified Against Fiance and Says They Will Be Married Soon.

LYNN, Nov. 18.—Because her sweetheart, William Gillis, forced his way into her home after a quarrel, shot the lock off her door and then threatened her with a revolver, pretty Katherine Watkins steeled her heart against him and appeared as a witness against him in court and told how he had threatened her and how she had wrested from him the smoking weapon.

But when the judge sentenced him to four months in the House of Correction, pity burst through the hardness with which she had encased her heart and at the sight of her former sweetheart leaving the dock Miss Watkins broke down and begged the judge to rescind the sentence. Later she visited the jail and kissed her sweetheart through the bars of his cell. Gillis has appealed from his sentence and both he and Miss Watkins are hoping for his release by the higher court. They are planning an early marriage.

"I love Billy and I always have ever since I first met him at a dance," said Miss Watkins to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "Our courtship was a happy one until a few weeks ago, when we had a quarrel. It was Billy's fault and I told him so. Then we parted and I have grieved over him ever since.

"When he came to the house to see me the other day and shot the lock off my door, I did not think I could ever forgive him. I am sorry now that I caused his arrest, but I was angry and for awhile I did fear for my life.

"I did not want to take the stand against him, but I felt compelled to do so, and I suppose my testimony caused the judge to send Billy to prison. It was awful. I could have asked the judge to send me away when I saw poor Billy leaving the dock.

"But I hope that Billy and I may be married soon, for we have made up, even if we did have to through the iron bars of his cell. Poor Billy, he didn't mean any harm, and I know he loves me. It will break my heart if they do put him in prison."

Miss Watkins, who is a pretty blond barely twenty years old, is at present stopping at the home of Gillis's sister, Mrs. Katherine Wright, at East Saugus. Her friends expect to see the couple married soon.

SEA PREVENTS MOVING LEPERS

NEW BEDFORD, Nov. 18.—The State Board of Charities had lanned to remove the Wareham and Harwich lepers to the new State leprosarium on Penikese island, but were prevented by unfavorable weather conditions.

The lepers were taken to Agawam and were to have been taken to the island in a thirty-foot auxilliary cat boat, owned by the board, but the heavy northwest blow kicked up such a sea in Buzzards Bay as to make the trip perilous, and the transfer was abandoned. An effort was being made to secure a larger vessel in this city, in which the trip can be made safely with less regard to weather conditions. It is expected the transfer of the lepers will be made to-day.

ROMANCE OF MEDFIELD GIRL FULL OF PATHOS

Robert A. Dobyns, Who Married Miss Kenniston, Says Father Is Nobleman.

STORY OF THE COURTSHIP

Back of the marriage of Miss Mabel W. Kenniston of Wakefield and Robert Albert Dobyns, said to be the disinherited son of an earl, is a story in which romance and pathos, joy and sorrow, are strangely commingled.

With the bride suffering from nervous collapse, as a result of the terrible strain she had passed through in the illness and death of both her parents, with her mother lying dead at home and her father only in his grave two days, the marriage ceremony, performed by Pastor Williams of the Medfield Baptist Church gained in its inexpressible sadness an added solemnity.

It was a ceremony which fulfilled the last request of the dying mother who could not die and leave her only child unprotected. Immediately after her marriage the bride became so seriously ill that her physician ordered an immediate change of scene for her. So she was unable to be present at the funeral of her mother.

The romance of the two young people which was terminated under such tragic conditions dates back two years ago, this month, when Mabel Kenninston and Robert Dobyns met in La Chine, Canada.

Love at First Sight.

It was a case of love at first sight. Mrs. Kenniston and her daughter returned to their Medfield home, but the young Englishman did not allow distance to interrupt his courtship. Letters flew back and forth, each one freighted with assurances of growing regard.

Finally it appeared to the young man that life without the pretty Medfield maid was not worth while. He proposed marriage. She accepted. But Mabel Kenniston was an only child, and to her fond parents Canada seemed very far away.

At last it was decided that he should go to Medfield and make his home with his fiancee's people, going into business with Mr. Kenniston, who refused to allow the marriage to take place until his future son-in-law proved himself an earnest man of business. Those who met Mr. Dobyns in Medfield liked him. And they were hard to please when choosing a husband for Mabel Kenniston was under consideration, for she is one of the most popular and dearly loved girls in a town where her father has been a prosperous merchant and an upright man.

Is Brilliantly Educated.

For years Samuel J. Kenniston conducted a grocery store in Attleboro. When his daughter's sweetheart came to Medfield he made him his confidential secretary. So satisfactory had his business ability proved that he was to have an interest in another business.

Mr. Dobyns is a most agreeable man to meet.

He is brilliantly educated and a charming conversationalist. It is said that he is the son of an English Earl and three years ago was disinherited because he refused to marry a titled lady of his father's choice.

Various influences from members of the bride's family had served to postpone the marriage from time to time, and the young people were chafing under the delay.

Two weeks ago Mr. Kenniston was taken ill with pneumonia and died. Two days after he was laid away Mrs. Kenniston succumbed to the same disease.

With almost her last breath she begged her daughter and Robert Robyns to marry, that Mabel might be cared for. The wedding followed in accordance with the last wishes of the mother.

It is probable that before long the young people will return to England. In the meantime the bride is seriously ill and under a physician's constant care.

GIRL WHO WEDDED NOBLE GROCERY CLERK

FAMILY DESTITUTE; IN STRANGE LAND

A sad-faced woman and two weeping children in the women's dormitory of the immigration detention station at Long wharf are mourning the death of husband and father. Without friends to aid them, they are all alone in the world.

When the Canopic arrived from Italy, October 2, she had among her steerage passengers Carmello Bertoloni, his wife Virginia and two handsome children. The man was taken ill on the passage and failed to pass the physical examination. He was taken to the City Hospital, where he has died. The San Raphael Society will take charge of the funeral. The woman and children will be permitted to attend the funeral, after which they will be sent back to Italy.

LEAGUERS SAY GAINS MUST SEAT HEARST

Average Shown by Tally Sheets Indicate Triumph for Ownership Candidate.

GLARING FRAUDS FOUND

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Such glaring discrepancies have been found in the returns of nearly all the election districts so far examined by the Board of Canvassers that counsel for the Municipal Ownership League will apply to the Supreme Court to have all the boxes opened and the ballots counted.

This announcement was made last night by Attorney Henry Young. The action will be taken either Monday or Tuesday.

The Municipal League people last night were sanguine that the tally count by the Board of Canvassers would count Mr. Hearst in. They claim that the increase thus far shown indicates an average gain of one and one-half votes for each election district for Mr. Hearst, and that with only that average, and they expect it will be larger, the increase will surely seat Mr. Hearst.

In four assembly districts in Manhattan and Brooklyn, William Randolph Hearst yesterday gained 262 votes by the comparison of the tally sheets and the returns made by the election inspectors to the board of canvassers. The count showed that 174 votes credited to Mr. Hearst on the tally sheets had been left off the returns, and that 88 ballots had been counted for McClellan which the tally sheets showed were not cast for him.

The biggest gain for Mr. Hearst which the canvass has yet developed was in the Second Assembly District of Brooklyn. There he gained 123 votes and McClellan lost 70. This was the district in which worked Eddie Milan, McCarren's trusted lieutenant, who has been indicted on two charges—attempted bribery and assault.

In many of the election districts of this district the Hearst watchers were barred from the polling places, and this wide discrepancy was not unexpected. It was in the eighth election district that McClellan lost seventy votes. The returns made by the board gave him 200 votes, but the tally sheets showed that he was only entitled to 130.

Three assembly districts in Manhattan showed an absolute gain of sixty-nine votes for Mr. Hearst in the comparison of the tally sheets with the returns to the Board of Elections. Fifty-one of this number credited to him on the tally sheets had been left out of the returns, and eighteen were counted for McClellan, which, by the tally sheets, did not belong to him.

In addition to this discrepancy, 96 votes were found to be in doubt, and, though it is the belief of the Hearst lawyers that 46 of them should be counted for the Municipal League candidate, and 50 of them deducted from McClellan's total, the election inspectors' returns are in such a muddled shape that this point can only be decided by opening the ballot boxes and recounting the votes in these districts.

FIERCE FIRE DRIVES 50 FAMILIES FROM HOMES

TWO HELPLESS WOMEN ARE CARRIED FROM BURNING TENEMENT—3 FIREMEN HURT.

Fifty families were routed from their homes in the tenements in Leland place and on Washington and other adjoining streets, South End, by a fire that destroyed the Continental warehouse, a five-story building in the rear of No. 1,293 Washington street, and kept the greater part of the fire department of the city busy until early to-day.

Narrow escapes were frequent. Two women had to be carried through the smoke and flames, and three members of the department were severely injured. That no loss of life occurred is due to the prompt action of the police, firemen and cool-headed citizens. Several small buildings nearby were destroyed before the fire was under control, and others suffered considerable damage. The total loss is estimated at between $60,000 and $75,000. The cause of the fire is unknown.

The fire was discovered by Patrolman Geary, of the East Dedham street station, who turned in the first alarm. At that time the flams were breaking through the roof of the warehouse, and before the apparatus could get to the place on the first alarm, a huge mass of blaze was shooting into the air to a height of 100 feet. A second alarm was turned in by a passer-by, who saw the blaze shortly after Geary had sent in an alarm. A moment later Chief Cheswell arrived and realizing at once the seriousness of the situation he turned in the third and fourth alarms.

District Chief Ryan Hurt.

In answer to the fourth alarm certain apparatus started from Brighton. District Chief John Ryan, accompanied by his driver, Joseph McLaughlin, of the Brighton district, running ahead of the apparatus, collided with an automobile opposite No. 493 Commonwealth avenue, and were thrown violently from their wagon to the ground.

Chief Ryan was picked up in a semi-conscious condition and carried into the home of H. A. Frothingham, in front of which the accident occurred, where he was treated by Dr. Conant. He was later removed to his home. The driver, McLaughlin, was less seriously injured than the chief, and was taken to engine house No. 33, where Dr. Ogden cared for him. Both men were severely cut about the head and face, and it is feared that Chief Ryan sustained internal injuries.

The fire was a peculiarly difficult one for the firemen to handle. It was impossible for the engines to get near the blaze in any numbers, and the fighting had to be done from Leland place, an alley leading from the street, and the roofs of nearby buildings. The Continental Hotel on Washington street, directly in the rear of which the fire was located, was threatened, and the nine families occupying it were forced to run for safety. The flames caught on the woodwork about the windows of the hotel several times, and the sparks and embers were constantly falling on the building.

Two Women Rescued.

Mrs. Jane Spaulding, an invalid, living on the third floor of the hotel, was forgotten in the rush of the other tenants to escape and to save their families. She lay in her bed and from the window could see the flames darting across the short space intervening between the hotel and the burning structure and catching on the woodwork. The roar of the fire and the shouts of the firemen and spectators drowned her feeble cries for help. At last her son-in-law, Lee Morrison, aided by A. H. Levy and A. Altshuler, went to her rescue and carried her from the building.

Mrs. Jennie Farnsworth was overcome by smoke, driven through her window in the same building, and had to be carried out by policemen, who were making a final search of the place. Among the others who were driven out of this building were: Mr. and Mrs. Lee Morrison, Abraham Altshuler and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Levy, Michael Straw, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Kline and three children, Ruth, Josie and Gertie, Mr. and Mrs. Lou Pearlstein and six children, Rose, Samuel, Ida, Richard, Nathan and Sally, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward D'Arcy.

From an old two-story tenement house on Leland place more than twenty people were taken by the police. Among them were Mrs. Ellen Dohohue and her young son, Mrs. Mary Tracy, John Tracy, Mr. and Mrs. Michael A. Sullivan and four children.

Facts About Big South End Fire

Fifty families driven out.

Three firemen injured.

Two women carried from building.

Numerous narrow escapes.

Estimated loss, $60,000 to $75,000.

Cause of fire unknown.

Engineer Is Burned.

During the fire Fireman John Williams, assistant engineer of Engine 26, was more or less seriously burned about the face and hands by falling sparks. Williams was attended by one of the department physicians, and later resumed his work on the engine.

Considerable excitement prevailed in the Washingtonian Home for Inebriates at No. 41 Waltham street. The rear of the home was but a short distance from the blaze and many of the inmates were hard to control while the fire was in progress.

The most spectacular feature of the fire was the rushing of the elevated trains on Washington street. With the flames leaping hundreds of feet in the air, and with great volumes of smoke swelling up over the roof of the Continental Hotel, carrying heavy showers of sparks, the trains dashed through at top speed.

In an adjoining shed, which was destroyed, C. O. Johnson, an automobile manufacturer, had three machines of his own make, while another was stored in the main building. These were all destroyed.

The warehouse building was a large five-story brick structure, circular in shape and built fifty years ago for a gasometer. Since that time it had been used as a piano factory, a riding school and for the storage of furniture.

Of the property destroyed by the fire the heaviest loser is probably the estate of the late actor, Lawrence Barrett, valued at $10,000. In the building was stored a collection of paintings which were to be put up at auction in about a week.

MAN OF PEACE INVENTS BIG WAR ENGINE

Millionaire Stokes Tells of His New Flotting Fort.

FOUR VESSELS IN ONE

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Anson Stokes, the millionaire philanthropist, announced to the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers that he had succeeded in so improving his floating fort as to cure its instability and render it by far the strongest fighting ship in the world.

Mr. Stokes has christened his new monster the Ultima. It is 270 feet long, 100 feet broad, has a displacement of 30,000 tons, twice that of the greatest battleship, has 10,000 horsepower, and can steam, under forced draught, eight and one-fourth knots an hour. It will carry two fifteen-inch guns, sixteen twelve-inch guns and twenty three-inch guns. Each of the fifteen-inch guns will weigh 135 tons, or as much as the famous sixteen-inch gun on Sandy Hook.

Thus equipped, Mr. Stokes said the Ultima could destroy any battleship in the world before the latter could get close enough to bring her own guns in range. She is practically four armored vessels in one, and could fight with all her might when submerged up to her gun deck, in which case she would show scarcely more freeboard than a monitor.

"I am a man of peace," said Mr. Stokes. "Some friends have criticised my designing a war vessel. Study of the subject has convinced me that nothing we can do will so conduce to peace as, while seeking to avoid foreign complications, providing adequately for our own defence. Naval battles are more decisive than land battles."

Mr. Stokes showed drawings of a model of the Ultima which is a modification of the shape of the Cerberus, enabling it to be steered under control from six up to fifteen knots an hour.

BLIND MAN CHARGED WITH MATE'S MURDER

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 18.—Blind and tottering with age and weakness, Daniel F. Moriarty, an aged inmate of the City Poor Farm, is accused of murdering John McGill, his chum and roommate. McGill was found dead on his cot and Moriarty lay slumbering peacefully on his own bed. Moriarty denied all knowledge of the crime. It was thought McGill might have fallen out of bed, but his bruised head was too bad for this.

ENGLISH TAR PUTS OUT YANKEE IN THE THIRD

COKAYNE OF H. M. S. DRAKE WHIPS REME OF U. S. S. IOWA.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—W. E. Cokayne, the English middleweight and heavyweight champion of the British Atlantic Squadron, and now a member of the crew of H. M. S. Drake, which is Prince Louis's flagship, defeated Jack Reine, the best sailor fighter on the United States battleship Iowa, in three rounds at Tom Sharkey's gymnasium on West Sixty-fifth street last night. The old Comedy Theatre, which was the scene of the battle, was crowded to its utmost capacity with prominent clubmen, politicians and bankers, leaving little or no room for the sailormen, many of whom were turned away for lack of space to put them in.

Reine gave a poor exhibition against the English champion, but in justice to the American sea fighters it must be said that Reine is far from the champion, and is not particularly noted for his pugilistic abilities.

He was only a substitute for Collins, the real champion of the United States Atlantic Squadron, and he proved a very poor one at that. The great international battle between Collins and Cokayne, which has been talked of so much since the English and American fleets have been here, was marred by the failure of Collins to get shore leave to take part in the contest.

Having broken liberty, he was not permitted to leave the Kearsarge, and when this was learned, Sharkey and his friends began to hunt up the next best man. Unfortunately they picked an individual who reminded the spectators of Mike Morrissey.

Yankee Knocked Down.

Cokayne showed considerable knowledge of the game, and it was evident from the start that he would win. He was aggressive, and his straight lefts and right-hand swings kept the Yankee fighter busy. Several times he had Reine in a bad way, and it appeared to those about the ringside that the second round was cut a trifle short. The third and last round was all in favor of the Englishman. After one minute of fighting Cokayne landed a left-hand on the jaw and followed it up with a right hook that sent Reine sprawling to the floor.

Just at this time the gong sounded, signifying the end of the round, but in reality there was still two minutes of the third round to be fought. The five hundred or more American spectators were a disappointed lot from the start of the bout, for the result seemed inevitable once the men sparred for action. When the finish came, there was a dead silence.

So surprised were the sports that they forgot to cheer the Englishmen for his victory. But Cockayne was too elated to even notice this. Immediately after he was presented with the cup offered by Tom Sharkey for the Winter. Then he rushed across the ring and holding Reine about the body with both hands, kissed him affectionately on the cheek, and it's a good bet that Renie will meet with a warm reception when he returns to the Iowa. The betting is even that he will not be among the crew when the great battleship steams out of port to-day.

The fact that the two greatest fighters of the English and American navies were to battle for the championship aroused the sporting blood of the local bloods, and long before the time for opening the clubhouse arrived there was a crowd outside clamoring for admission. Every spectator was made a member of the club to conform with the law, under which three-round bouts are permitted. The scene reminded many of the old Horton law days when boxing flourished about New York.

Several policemen in charge of Captain Handy kept the crowd in order, and when the first preliminary bout was put on there was hardly room to force another person into the hall. The fights took place at the extreme southern end of the hall on a raised platform.

An an apetizer to the main international struggle seven preliminary bouts between boxers of prominence took place. All interest was centered in the heavyweight fight, and when the rivals put in their appearance they got a rousing cheer from the spectators.

Cockayne was the first to enter the ring, wearing the British colors around his waist about his black trunks. Deep-chested and stocky of legs, he looked all the part of the fighter that he is. He stripped much heavier than one would imagine to see him in street clothes. He sat in his corner with all the coolness and indifference of the professional boxer. When he glanced across the ring to the opposite corner he wore a broad smile.

Reine was just the opposite in build to that of his opponent. He was tall and thin, more on the style of Corbett, and did not appear to possess the strength and stamina of the Englishman.

There was some delay in taking a flashlight for the newspaper photographers, and then the men were introduced. Both received a warm reception, and as the returned to their respective corners Referee Sharkey requested the men to shak hands before they began hostilities.

First Round.

At the gong Cockayne advanced to the centre of the ring cautiously with a crouch that rivalled even that of Jeffries. With his knees bended and his hands almost touching the floor, he wanded into the American and shot out his left to the face which he quickly followed up with a right cross to the jaw. Reine was too busy trying to stop the Englishman's leads to do damage. He broke ground continuously. Cockayne sent another left to the face, and in a mix-up both landed rights on the face but with little effect. Cockayne kept boring in, and planted a hard right and two straight lefts on the face. Cockayne was doing all the leading and he tried hard to get the American in a corner. His straight left reached the face again and before Reine could get away he planted two lefts to the jaw.

Second Round.

In the second round Reine landed the only effective blow that he scored during the fight. Once he ranged into his opponent and ripped a left over to the nose that jarred the Englishman a bit, but he was bea kready for fight, and Reine's lack of experience cost him the oportunity to follow up the advantage. Cokayne landed a left on the face that almost sent Reine off the platform, the ropes alone saving him from a bad fall. Cokayne seemed anxious to score a knockout. He feinted and lande da left on the face and crossed the right to the jaw in a deliberate manner. He was cool, while Reine was nervous. Cokayne was mixing it in the centre of the ring when the gong sounded, but the men did not appear to be fighting the full three minutes of the round.

Cockyane continued to use his left jab effectively in the third and final round. He kept after Reine, and once crossed him with a right on the cheek. Reine let go a hard right to the face that shook the Englishman up. Cockyane came back with a rush, and landed a left on the jaw, followed by a right hook, that took Reine off his feet. He was shaken up, and was somewhat dazed as he was regaining his feet, but before he could get up the bell sounded. The time of the round was one minute.

CAMBRIDGE, Nov. 18.—The Harvard and Yale freshmen have their annual gridiron battle on Soldiers Field this afternoon. The game will undoubtedly be as similar games have been for the last fifteen years, except that the oldest son of the President of the United States will play left end on the Harvard team. When T. Roosevelt, Jr., freshman, came out for his class eleven six weeks ago everybody was anxious to see just what a President's son looked like in football togs. They saw a rather short and very slight young man. The general opinion was that Theodore Jr. would soon be dropped, as he did not have the beef to make the eleven.

But Theodore wasn't dropped, and to-day he will win his coveted "1904" by getting in the game against Yale. The coaches say that young Roosevelt has shown a fighting spirit in his work, and hence is needed on the eleven. Theodore stands 5 feet 8 inches in height and weighs 145 pounds. He plays left end. V. P. Kennard plays right end on the Crimson freshman eleven. He stands 6 feet 1 inch in height and weighs just 187 pounds.

EDELS BOXES WITH MEYERS

PORTLAND, Nov. 18.—Harry Edels of Chelsea and Lew Meyers of New York struck a frosty house and only boxed an eight-round exhibition instead of the scheduled fifteen-round bout.

Retired Champion Heavyweight Fighter Wouldn't Play on Gridiron for $1,000 a Minute.

JEFF CALLS FOOTBALL BRUTAL

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 18.—James J. Jeffries, retired heavyweight champion of the world and a man who has received many hard blows, says football is a brutal game and that the sum of $1,000 a minute would not induce him to enter the game.

"Can a gentleman play football?" the former champion was asked.

"Gentlemen can play any game," he replied, "but I don't see how any gentleman can feel at home in a game of football as it is played to-day. Football is far more brutal than prize fighting.

"Every time the ball is put in play eleven men are lined up to fight eleven men. It's all well to say the side with the ball is trying to rush it across the line by using speed and skill, and that the enemy is trying to prevent this by using speed and skill, but, as a matter of fact, the two teams sing each other from the start to finish, and if they didn't slug, good people wouldn't go to look at them.

"Every healthy man or woman likes to see a fight, and football is the hardest kind of fighting I ever have looked at. You may call it a strenuous sport or any other fancy name you like, but it is just a big, redhot fight, all the same.

Football Unrestrained Fighting.

"Just look at the difference between football and prize fighting—it's all in favor of prize fighting. In the ring you can hit a man only with your fists and only above the belt. If you strike low, or if you butt with the head, or use your elbow or shoulder to strike your man, the referee calls a foul on you and you lose the battle. In football you are supposed never to hit a man with your fist, but you can block him with the shoulder, or give him the elbow, or kick him, or jump on him when he is down.

"I know football people will deny this and say these things happen only by accident. Let them call it accident if they like, but it is a pretty fierce game where this kind of accident happens every time two teams clash. If a fighter tried to bring off that kind of an accident in the ring he'd be disqualified and hooted out of the place.

"Here's a funny thing. A fight crowd, which some people like to describe as a bunch of ruffians, won't stand for the rough work that fine society people applaud and cheer on the gridiron for all they're worth.

"In the ring the referee is watching both the fighters all the time. If either one of them commits a foul he is seen and disqualified right away. On the football field there are twenty-two fighters, and all the referees in the world couldn't keep track of the blows hit in the scrimmages.

"Not for $1,000 a Minute."

"If every player in the game were to obey the rules all the time and never commit a foul, football would still be ten times more dangerous than fighting in the ring. As they play the game nowadays, I wouldn't go into it for a thousand dollars a minute."

In reply to Jeffries' criticism of the game "Texas" Charwate, Yale '08, declares the attacks on football emanate from dyspeptic critics who, during their youth, developed their minds at the expense of their bodies. He says a team made up of prize fighters would have absolutely no show against an all American college team.

NELSON SAYS HE DOESN'T POSE AS A BOXER, BUT WINS HIS SUCCESS IN RING AS A FIGHTER

CINCINNATI, Nov. 18.—"I didn't hurt him," was Battling Nelson's laconic reply to the suggestion made by a friend of Jimmy Britt that the lightweight champion had handled the little Californian rather roughly in the last meeting on the coast.

This led to the remark by Nelson that he did not pose as a boxer. "There is a vast difference between a boxer and a fighter," said Nelson. "I daresay that if I was pitted against some of these gymnasium experts in a contest of points I would be outclassed, for the simple reason that in order to make a picturesque showing—do the pretty act in the matter of blocking, countering, guarding and leading—it is necessary to eliminate the real fighting features of pugilism; and when that is done the real essence of the sport dies out.

"My manager, Billy Nolan, has advised me time and time again not to go in for the scientific boxing game. 'You're a fighter,' he says, 'and not a boxer. Many a good fighter has been spoiled by paying too much attention to boxing. You stick to fighting and let the pretty boys who like to tap each other gently on the ear, give the exhibitions of the 'so-called manly art of self defence.' Good advice, I think, and I'm following it. When I go into the rigg I want to get in as many punches on the other fellow in places where they will do the most good, and in order to do this I'm willing to take a few hard raps myself—and I know I can stand them."

Nelson voices the sentiment of Manager Nolan by declaring that he is not in a hurry to take on any of the fighters who are clamoring for coin through a go with Nelson. "Britt made we wait a long time for a fight with him," said Nelson, "and I'll make the others do a little waiting myself. However, in time I expect to have a go at all of them—Gardner, McGovern, Britt and others—that may apply."

HANLON WILL FIGHT ERNE

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 18.—Manager McCarey of the Pacific Coast Athletic Club of Los Angeles announces that Young Erne, the Eastern lightweight, has been matched to fight a twenty-round go with Eddie Hanlon in this city on December 15.

HARVARD GUNNERS WON.

At a meet between the Harvard Gun Club and a picked team from the Boston Gun Club, on Soldiers Field yesterday afternoon, the Harvard team won by a score of 194-187. The best score of the day was 42 out of a possible 58 birds, which was won by Wickers Law.

BROWN WILL HAVE 'SUB' TEAM TODAY

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 18.—Brown lines up against the University of Vermont team on Andrew Field this afternoon for the last home game this season, and the last game before the final, all-important game with Dartmouth next Saturday. The team which Coach Robinson will send against the Green Mountain boys is not the strongest available, neither Schwartz, quarterback, Conklin, centre, or Curtis, right half, getting into the game. Rackle will take the place of Schwartz, Thomas will fill in at centre and Welkert will occupy Curtis's place at right half. This team is by no means a weak one, as the three men who are playing in place of the regulars are all veterans, and can be depended upon to put up a good game.

It is not expected that Vermont will prove very strong, as they have not done anything alarming thus far this season. Dartmouth only succeeded in defeating them 12 to 0 at the beginning of the season, and later they scored on Amherst, whom Dartmouth was unable to defeat last Saturday.

In all probability there will be a large crowd on hand to see in what condition the team is and to get a line on what they will be able to do against Dartmouth next Saturday. Coach Robinson, accompanied by Schwartz, Curtis and Conklin, will witness the Dartmouth-Harvard game and endeavor to get a line on the style of play used by the wearers of the green and white.

RUBE TO HAVE A TRAINER

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—Rube Waddell, the crack pitcher of the Philadelphia American League baseball team, who is suffering from rheumatism, will leave next month for Hot Springs, Ark., to undergo treatment, so as to get his arm in condition for next season. George Edward is now with his parents at St. Mary's, Pa., and is in the best possible shape, with the exception of the rheumatism, which gives him twinges at different times.

Connie Mack's big twirler will go in style to the popular winter resort, as he will have a trainer with him whose duties will be to attend to the wants of Rube alone. The rest of the Quaker Americans will train at either New Orleans or Montgomery, Ala., with the chances in favor of the latter city.

O'LEARY DREW WITH ERNE

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 18.—Young O'Leary made a much better showing than was expected against Young Erne of Philadeldelphia, going to a draw with a fighter much his superior.

The draw decision was the result of an agreement. Erne was five pounds overweight and refused to weigh in. After a wrangle it was decided that if both boys were on their feet at the end of the fight a draw would be declared.

LAY UP A STOCK OF LOVE WHEN YOU SAVE FOR THE RAINY DAY

Don't Get Into the Poorhouse of the Soul

By Dorothy Dix

ALL the philosophers from Poor Richard down have emphasized the necessity of laying up something for a rainy day.

This bit of wise counsel has been universally taken to refer to the prudence of putting aside enough money to provide for one's old age or tide one over a period of illness or financial stress.

Strangely enough, nothing is ever said about laying up spiritual and mental treasures for use in a time of adversity, yet not all of our rainy days are the days in which we lack money. There come hours to all of us when our need for love and tenderness and interest is just as pressing as any need for a bank account could be.

There is a poorhouse of the soul, no less than a poorhouse for the body, in which we must inevitably spend our old age unless we have provided against it in our youth.

The saddest and most drear sight on earth is that of a poor, forlorn, lonely and neglected old man or woman, and none of us ever behold it without a quick fear gripping our hearts that such a fate may some time come to us.

We have a sudden, prescient, lightning-quick vision of ourselves grown feeble and garrulous and cranky and tiresome, and feel ourselves an always unwelcome guest, extorting an unwilling toleration from all with whom we come in contact.

Ties of Blood

IT is a doom to affright the boldest, but it need never be anybody's, unless they will it.

Just as by prudence and thrift, and taking the proper thought in our youth, we can save ourselves from poverty in our old age, so we can lay up when we are young a treasure of affection and interest that we can draw upon without fear through the lean years of age.

If you want to have love when you are old you must lay it up while you are young.

It is in old age that the ties of blood count most.

It is to their children that the old father and mother must look for cherishing; it is in their brothers and sisters' homes they must hope to find a warm spot by the hearthstone, if they have no home of their own, and they will find these things exactly in proportion in which they have laid them up.

Hours of Need

WE should also lay up interests for our rainy day, when we shall be forced from the active pursuits of life. There comes a time when the business man must give up his business, when the society woman is too old and feeble for the ballroom, and the housekeeper must relegate her duties to younger hands.

Nobody so restless, so forlorn, so bored, then, as these unfortunates who have not laid up any interest for their rainy day.

Be sure that rainy days, in one way or another, come to us all.

Then, in our hour of need, if we have helped nobody, if we have shown sympathy to no one, if we have wept with nobody over their dead, if we have rejoiced in nobody else's joys and triumphs, be sure that when we make our demand upon the love and sympathy of our fellow-creatures, our drafts will be returned to us dishonored.

If you want your children to love you when you are old, and to consider it a precious privilege to be able to minister to you, you must begin when they are born to provide for that contingency.

Love in a child's heart is not a flower of sudden growth.

Every day you see fathers and mothers who are too much engrossed in business or society to really get acquainted with their children, who never enter into their boys' and girls' pleasures, and who never speak to them except to correct them for some fault.

Why are such parents foolish enough to believe that these children are going to want to bother themselves in later life with an old man or woman that they remember merely as a disagreeable tyrant, who bullied them when they were too little and helpless to resent it?

"BE SURE THAT RAINY DAYS COME TO US ALL."

"CONVICT 99"

CHAPTER LIII.

In Newgate Chapel

WHEN Laurence arrived he was taken to a cell and served with a pint of cocoa and a loaf of bread. He ate and drank, and finally lay down to sleep, with dreams of freedom which he believed must now be near.

At 6 o'clock the clanging of the morning bell awoke him, and after he had polished the asphalt floor of his cell, cleaned all the utensils and eaten his breakfast he was summoned to chapel.

Presently he found himself in the cage-like space, shut off by iron bars, for convicts who had been tried and sentenced and were waiting to be drafted to one of the prisons.

In the cage opposite were men who had been committed for trial, still wearing their own clothes.

Laurence glanced carelessly over them, and suddenly his gaze became fixed and the color flushed to his cheeks and brow. There was one head darker than the rest, the head of a man who sat in sullen defiance. Laurence leaned forward with throbbing eagerness.

The man was twelve yards away but at that moment, for some reason, raised his head and looked around. Laurence saw his face fully. It was the face of his enemy, his oppressor, the one man alive against whom his heart cried out to heaven for vengeance.

"So he is here," he murmured below his breath. "Here at last, and among those who are committed for trial."

Their eyes met across the distance. There was a gleam of mockery in Ralph Vickers's eyes as he surveyed his rival's shorn head and ignominious clothing. But in that moment, more than ever before, the noble face and manly dignity of Laurence Craig triumphed over the degradation of his convict garb.

He saw the taunt in Vickers's eyes and his own eyes answered back.

"It is because of you that I am here. Even here, in this very chapel, at this very moment, I am bearing the load of your guilt."

Vickers smiled insolently.

CHAPTER LIV.

The Second Trial

IMMEDIATELY after chapel that first morning of his stay in Newgate, Lawrence was summoned to the visiting room to have an interview with his solicitor. The interview was long, and in the course of it the solicitor, Mr. Gilmore, informed Laurence that the best counsel would be retained to watch the case on his behalf at the expense of Mr. Christopher Lucas.

Laurence walked back to his cell as though he were treading on air. The asphalt under foot was cold with the chill of December, and snow drifted past the barred window from which he could just get a glimpse of the great dome of St. Paul's.

But he was happy, for justice was coming at last, and, indeed, it came sooner than he expected.

The second trial of the Gospel Oak murder case created a great public interest. A large number of spectators gathered at the Old Bailey to see the man who had spent nearly two years in penal servitude and the man who was now occupying the place in the dock that had once been occupied by Laurence Craig.

Vickers was deadly pale, his lips twitched convulsively, and his fingers nervously played with his watch chain. But he tried to assume an air of unconcern as he crossed his legs and glanced from judge to jury.

Presently his eyes wandered to the bench in front of the jury box, where Geraldine Lucas sat in close conference with a solicitor. His gaze kindled with thwarted passion as it lingered upon her.

Laurence Craig was brought in, wearing a heavy overcoat above his prison dress. His warder seated himself beside him near the jury box, and Laurence's eyes met those of Geraldine, fair as ever, but pale and anxious as she greeted him with a smile. Her solicitor left her and gave Laurence greeting from her, and then passed on to speak with Laurence's counsel.

The counsel for the prosecution outlined the case, pointing out that the conviction of the man at the bar meant the acquittal of the man who had narrowly escaped death, and had already served two years in prison for the crime of which he had been convicted. Added evidence warranted the new trial, and he believed that a court of criminal appeal should be established to deal with such cases.

The prisoner, Ralph Vickers, stood charged with the murder of Charles Kesteven two years before, on Wednesday, February 15. Craig had been arrested, convicted, sentenced to death and his sentence commuted to life imprisonment. Twice he had attempted to escape, and the second time he had been at large for some days, during which he began the proceedings and produced the evidence that had led to the arrest of Vickers and his trial for murder.

At the original trial Vickers had been one of the witnesses for the defence, and it was to be assumed that his evidence had blinded the jury, amounting as it did to a skilful alibi for himself.

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

His Campaign Against a Gang of Philippine Pirates

CHAPTER X.

By a Hairbreadth

MAINTAINING his position in the high surf with difficulty Jack waited for the torpedo.

To his friends on shore it seemed as if the engine of destruction was moving with incredible swiftness.

To Jack it seemed an age before it at last poked its black nose through a breaker, and he sprang forward to grapple with it.

It was a situation such as he had never met before.

If the torpedo was allowed to fall flat and heavily on the sand, it would end Jack Harkaway's adventures for good and all.

There was a chance, however, and Jack calculated it as a good one, of being able to check it, and bring it easily to the beach.

As the iron prow of the long cylinder passed him, Jack threw his whole weight on it, depressing it some two feet.

This threw the propeller, driven by compressed air, out of the water, and it raced harmlessly, throwing a cloud of spray from its small blades.

The momentum was soon checked and the torpedo lay in the water buffeted about by the surf, but not moving about.

Steel and Parsons had now perceived that there was some method in what they believed to be Jack's madness.

Both had followed him into the surf, and now not one, but all three men were holding down the head of the torpedo and trying to steady it in the waves.

Torpedo Disabled.

The propeller still raced, but Jack knew that it would be but a short time before the force of the compressed air would be spent and it would be safe to allow the torpedo to float on an even keel.

The power waned sooner, in fact, than he expected.

The screw spun slower and still more slowly, and at last stopped altogether.

One danger was now passed.

The torpedo could not of itself rush on to the sands, but to land it was a still more delicate task, for the waves were running high, and the least carelessness would tear the tube from the grasp of the men and throw it on the sand, to do its deadly work.

A great wave now came rolling in, and the men, clinging to the smooth iron sides for dear life, were lifted off their feet and hurled toward the shore.

As soon as they could touch bottom they braced themselves and backed the torpedo again out to sea.

Another giant wave followed, and then a third.

"Now," called Jack, "there will be a lull. Big waves come in threes."

He was right. The succeeding rollers were smaller.

"Ashore with it now," called Parsons, but Jack demurred.

Let me see if I cannot disable it first," he said, working his way round to the bow, where the trigger was placed.

"You'll blow yourself to atoms if you fool with that," yelled Steel, "and the rest of us, too."

"I'm not so sure," said Jack, shouting to make his voice heard above the roar of the waves.

A Daring Deed

"It will be a long chance to try to get it on the beach. The wind is rising and the tide is coming in.'

A glance from sea to shore showed the others that Jack was right as usual.

Driven by a strong sea wind the tide was rapidly running in on the beach.

Already they had been carried, torpedo and all, toward a point of the rocks, where the stones made out to the edge of the water.

It would be madness to try to land a torpedo there. The first contact with the stony bottom would set it off.

Jack had meanwhile been toiling manfully.

Presently he rose to an erect posture with a shout of triumph, holding something aloft in his hand.

It was a small splinter of iron, the trigger of the torpedo, which he had wrenched from its place.

"Let her go now!" he cried. "She can't do any damage."

With a deep sense of relief the three men, almost spent with exhaustion, waded ashore and sank on the stones almost at the edge of the hissing surf.

The torpedo rolled about in the sea, first stern and then bow pitched high above the waves, and presently with a loud smash it fell on the rocks and came rolling up on the beach.

But the danger was past now.

Without the trigger the thing was as harmless as a towboat, and in perfect security Jack watched it slide back into the sea, only to be cast up again by a mountainous roller and stick this time high and dry.

Another Attack

"By George," said Steel, slapping Jack fervently on the back. "That was wonderful nerve, my boy."

"Amen," said Parsons. "He's the only man in this wide world with the courage to tackle a torpedo. Bully boy, Jack."

"It's very kind of you," said Jack. "But it occurs to me that instead of spreading compliments around, we'd better be up and doing. Did you ever happen to think that Hunston might come back to see how his torpedo worked? Aha, I thought so."

He pointed to sea.

The others looked and saw that their enemy with his usual resourcefulness had planned an entirely new form of attack.

For the sea was sprinkled with small boats, nearly fifty of them, each filled with natives, swarming in from every direction.

"It looks as if we had to lick the entire population of the South seas," said Steel.

"And we can do it too, by Jimmy," said Parsons, "with Jack Harkaway here to tell us how."

But Jack was troubled. He was not so sure of his ability to meet an entire army of natives.

Three Democrats on Governor-Elect's Official Family; Two from Douglas's Escort.

ALL ARE WELL KNOWN

Before leaving the city for a short vacation, Governor-elect Curtis Guild, Jr., announced that his staff for the coming term of office will be made up of these men:

Brigadier-General James A. Frye, Boston, adjutant-general.

Brigadier-General Williah H. Devine, Boston, surgeon-general.

Brigadier-General William H. Brigham, Hudson, inspector-general.

Brigadier-General Fred B. Carpenter, Boston, commissary-general.

Brigadier-General William B. Emery, Boston, quarter-master-general.

Brigadier-General Hugh Bancroft, Cambridge, judge advocate-general.

Lieutenant-Colonel E. W. M. Bailey, Amesbury, assistant inspector-general.

Commander James P. Parker, Boston, naval inspector-general.

Colonel George H. Doty, Waltham, assistant inspector-general.

Lieutenant-Colonel Roger Wolcott, Milton, assistant inspector-general.

Major Edward Glines, Somerville, assistant-inspector-general.

Major John A. Cutrin, Brookline, aide-de-camp.

Major Thomas D. Carroll, Boston, aide-de-camp.

Major Charles H. Hayden, Boston, aide-de-camp.

Major Joseph J. Kelley, Boston, aide-de-camp.

Governor-elect Guild has chosen Charles F. Gettemy, political reporter for one of the Boston papers, to be his private secretary.

Three Democrats on Staff.

Of the eighteen men who make the new Governor's staff, two are retained from the staff of Governor Douglas. These men are Surgeon-General William H. Devine and Quartermaster-General William H. Emery. One Democrat is appointed, Major Kelley of the Ninth Regiment. The appointment is understood to be a personal tribute to the man, who is a warm friend of General Guild.

General Miles was not a candidate for the staff.

General Brigham, Colonel James G. White and Major Charles H. Hayden were members of the staff of Governor Bates. The political veteran of the staff is Major Edward Glines, former Mayor of Somerville.

The most important appointment and the only salaried one is that of Adjutant-General, which goes to Colonel James A. Frye. He succeeds General Stopford. As early as the middle of last Summer, it was said that Governor Guild promised this appointment to Frye, but the Stopford people hoped that this was only a rumor.

Without exception every officer of the staff has held a commission either in the service of the Commonwealth or of the United States. Ten of the new staff officers have served in the United States Volunteers, one in the United States Navy, and one in the United States Revenue Marine.

All Qualified Marksmen.

In marksmanship with the rifle, the staff is to be credited with four distinguished members, two expert marksmen, six sharpshooters, one marksman, three first-class marksmen and five second-class marksmen. In revolver marksmanship the staff shows one expert, three first-class and two second-class marksmen. Except the veteran Colonel Capelle, of the adjutant general's office, every man, including the commander-in-chief, has qualified as a marksman.

The military history of the members of the new staff is: Brigadier-General Frye was educated at the Boston Latin School and at Harvard College. In 1890 he enlisted in the militia and in 1898 was made a major of the First Massachusetts Heavy Artillery during the Spanish War. He was appointed on the staff of Governor Wolcott as Assistant Inspector-General in 1900 and has remained on the staffs of the succeeding Governors. General Frye was recommended by General Miles for command of a volunteer regiment during the Spanish War.

Brigadier-General William H. Devine is a graduate of Harvard Medical School in the class of 1883. He was appointed Lieutenant and Assistant Surgeon of the Ninth Massachusetts in 1893, Major and Surgeon in 1894, Medical Director of the Second Brigade in 1897 and Surgeon-General in 1905 by Governor Douglas.

Brigadier-General William H. Brigham of Hudson was one of the organizers of Company M, Fifth Infantry, in 1887. He was made a major on the staff of the First Brigade in 1897. Governor Crane appointed him lieutenant colonel in 1900, colonel and inspector general of rifle practice in same year. He resigned with the staff of Governor Bates. General Brigham has served on the committee on military and naval affairs in both the House and the Senate.

Some from Bates's Staff.

Brigadier-General Fred. B. Carpenter was on Governor Bates's staff. He entered the First Corps of Cadets in 1884. Governor Bates appointed him lieutenant colonel in 1903. He was made a brigadier general in 1904.

Brigadier-General William B. Emery served in Field Battery A from 1895 to 1899. Governor Douglas appointed him a brigadier general in 1905.

Brigadier-General Hugh Bancroft of Cambridge is a graduate of Harvard College and of the Harvard Law School. He has served in the militia since 1894. He was made Assistant Adjutant-General of the Second Brigade in 1903. He is now the assistant district attorney in Middlesex County.

Colonel William C. Capelle served in the militia in various capacities since 1895. He has been on the staff of the various Governors since 1864. Since 1895 he has been an Assistant Adjutant-General.

Colonel James G. White of Newton has risen from a private to Sergeant-Major in the First Corps of Cadets. His period of service was from 1886 to 1899. He was on Governor Crane's and Bates's staffs.

The remaining officers have enviable records, and have done faithful service in many capacities in the militia.

TO SELECT SITE FOR NEW LIGHTHOUSE

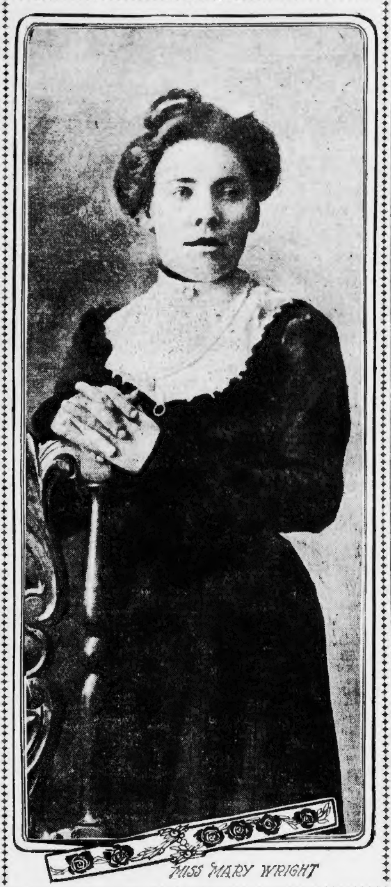
ROCKLAND, Me., Nov. 18.—Colonel Stanton, of Boston, chairman of the lighthouse board, and Royal Luther, of Boston, superintendent of this district, have arrived here on their way to Stockton Springs, where they will select the site for a new lighthouse, to be built during the coming year, on account of the immense shipping coming to that port.

BELGIUM'S HEIR DEAD.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 19.—The Count of Flanders, brother of King Leopold and heir to the crown, is dead of inflammation of the lungs.

His son, Prince Albert of Flanders, aged twenty, is now heir.

SISTER SEEKS MARY WRIGHT, MISSING NOW FIVE MONTHS



MISSING GIRL SOUGHT BY SISTER.

Left Exeter, N. H., on Train for Boston, June 21—Has Neither Been Seen Nor Heard From Since.

A pretty, sad-eyed sister is searching Boston for missing Mary Wright, who has not been seen or heard from by any relative or friend since June 21 last. Then she is supposed to have left the North station for a South End employment bureau.

Annie Wright, her youngest sister, came to the BOSTON AMERICAN and said:

"Won't you help me find my sister? I'm distracted with anxiety. My parents have written me from Ireland about Mary, and what can I tell them? I don't know where she is, or what has befallen her. Something must have happened, of that I am sure, else she would never have gone so long without writing or coming to see me.

"She loved me devotedly. We were always affectionate and the best of friends. She never was content to be far from me, and now months have passed. I have not seen her. I have not had a line from her. It seems as if she had dropped out of the world.

"She was twenty-eight years old, but did not look twenty-four. She had been in this country for ten years. Five years ago I came over to join her. We lived with Portland families until June. Then we came to Boston and looked for work at Mrs. King's, No. 600 Washington street. On June 13, Mary went to Exeter, N. H., to work in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Conner. She stayed there only a week and a day. She left there on June 21. The police found the cabman who drove her to the railroad station there. She took the 8.59 train for Boston. That is the last trace.

"I am sure she had considerable money with her. She might have had as much as $100. I cannot imagine what has fallen her. She was so innocent, so modest and so ignorant of the world's ways. She did not know much about Boston. She may have asked some stranger to direct her. I dread to think—I don't know what to think. But I know she was a good girl, as good as lives.

"We have found no trace of her trunk. We have not found a soul who saw her after she left Exeter. I want her picture published. It may be seen by some one who knows where she is now.

"Do I think that she met some stranger who lured her away to rob or ill treat her? I don't know. I am in fear and anguish!"

LAUNCH SINKS UNDER FISHERS

SCITUATE, Nov. 18.—The forty foot gasoline power fishing boat Princess of Gloucester lies on the bottom of the bay near Boston lightship, off Boston Harbor, and the crew of two men, James and John Marsh, after a thrilling day's experience crossing the bay in a small boat, safely landed on the beach, exhausted, but thankful to be alive.

According to Captain Marsh he and his brother left Plymouth early in the morning bound for Gloucester with a load of herring. They encountered rough weather and when off Minot's light the sea rendered their power useless and about one-quarter of a mile to the southward of the lightship the Princess sunk from under them, leaving them afloat in a fifteen-foot dory.

Captain Daniel Ward, on First Cliff, saw the men when they were about to make the attempt to land and aided them. Afterward he took the exhausted men to his home and made them comfortable, and saw them off on a late train for Boston.

ANTI-DIVORCE PLEA MADE BY BISHOP DOANE

WANTS UNITED ACTION

New York, Nov. 18.—Against divorce, which he termed legalized polygamy, the Right Rev. W. C. Doane, Bishop of Albany diocese, made an eloquent plea to the Interchurch Federation at Carnegie Hall.

"We are confronted and confounded in our day and in our land," he said, "with a condition of things about this question which discredits our country, dishonors our Christianity, disgraces our manhood and our womanhood, in the unparalleled frequency and the unlimited facility of divorce. Against this hideous and horrible infection the Christian Church, under whatever name, must stand together as one. Here is the place not for federation only, or combination, or co-operation, but of absolute, impregnable unity, and the place to begin is not in the Legislature or in the divorce courts, but in the teaching of the pulpit, the insistence of the ministry, and the influence of Christian manhood and womanhood for the solemnity and sacredness of marriage.

"The hastiness and thoughtfulness of men and women, who are really boys and girls, in betrothals, mere impulse with a frothy sentiment or a foul passion; the commercial management of matchmaking for place, for title, for money; the careless and criminal neglect of clergymen to find out the condition and circumstances of persons coming to them for marriage, are at the bottom of the misery of so much married life to-day.

"And as one who studies the surroundings of what is called a wedding in our time, one cannot but deplore the irreverent confusion and display which drowns the religiousness and disturbs the dignity of the service itself, and the vulgar violation of the modesty and privacy which belong to the entrance on this holy estate, with the horseplay of placarded trunks and labelled carriages and railway trains and stations crowded with noisy outsiders and reeking with pelted rice."

LABOR MEN TO JOIN HANDS WITH GRANGE

Federation to Establish Closer Relations With Farmers' Organizations.

N. E. MEN VISIT HOMESTEAD

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 18.—The federation of Labor dealt mainly with the question of organization and boycotts.

Upon a resolution by R. S. Malone of Lawrence, it was voted to appoint an organizer for that section.

A committee was appointed to attempt to establish amicable relations between the non-union papers of Pittsburg and the Typographical Union, F. K. Foster of Boston being one of the committee.

A delegate from the farmers' organization was given a seat in the convention, but without a vote.

The proposition to establish a universal label design, coming from the miners' organization, met with overwhelming defeat. It was voted to establish closer relations with the grange and other farmers' organizations.

Edward F. Ward, of Boston, is in the race for fraternal delegate to England.

A number of New England delegates visited the great iron works at Homestead and inspected the marvelous automatic processes by which huge blocks of steel are turned into plates, rails, armor, etc. They also visited the spot where the famous and now historic fight with the Pinkerton men took place during the great strike.

President Cornelius Shea of the Brotherhood of Teamsters, an oldtime Bostonian, arrived from Chicago. The teamsters' delegation is the third strongest numerically in the convention, casting 763 votes.

Many New England delegates will visit the Carnegie Institute on Sunday.

The Boston Central Labor Union is interested in the application of the steam fitters for a separate charter, which will come up the first of the week.

BARNEY FOR LYNN MAYOR.

LYNN, Nov. 18.—At the Republican caucus Neal Barney was nominated for mayor by a plurality of 103 votes over Mayor H. W. Eastham, who has held the office four terms.

JORDAN STILL LEADS HORSE SHOW WINNERS

TAKES BREWSTER PRIZE

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Eben D. Jordan still leads as the blue ribbon winner at the Horse Show. The latest honor achieved by his horses is the winning of the Brewster prize for pairs, shown before park vehicle, by Hildred and Plympton Champion. Mr. Jordan also took the blue ribbon in the class for ponies in harness with his champion Tangerine, Mrs. John Gerken's Solitaire being second and George Watson Jr.'s Prima Donna third.

One of the greatest surprises of the day was the defeat of Mr. Jordan's Hildred, driven by Miss Belle Beach, in the contest for the lady's prize, $100 in plate, for horses shown to a lady's phaeton and driven by women. Six horses competed. Lord Baltimore won, with Lady Eocene second and Hildred third.

In the afternoon Newsboy and Shop Girl, Mrs. John Gerken's prize-winning pair, lost to Miss Helen Fargo's Dainty and Poetry, the Jordan pair, Kitty Gray and Norina, winning second.

Forest King, Judge Moore's famous gelding, won first for conformation, quality, all-round action and style, J. W. Harriman's Laughing Water being second and E. D. Jordan's Laodamia third.

NOT BOAT CLUB MEMBER.

Timothy W. Crowley, arrested Thursday for assaulting Joe Lomasney in an election quarrel at Precinct 6, Ward 8, is not a member of St. Joseph Athletic Boat Club. President J. S. Hallahan also says that Crowley never was a member of the club.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, NOVEMBER 18, 1905.

Those Prize Fights in the Navy

Are They Legal? Does Mr. Roosevelt Approve Them? The People DO NOT APPROVE THEM

We have visiting us one of the lazy gentlemen of Europe, a polite royal parasite called Prince Louis of Battenberg.

This gentleman, one of the many "aristocrats" who do nothing and live on food provided by others, married an English princess, and the English people support him.

He has come over here, and a certain number of American geese are making UNUSUAL fools of themselves in his honor.

There is no especial harm in that. It is the nature of some ignorant men made suddenly rich to express their emotions, their sense of their own smallness, in snobbery.

Louis of Battenberg meeting samples of the American idiot does no harm. It can't hurt the idiot and it can't hurt Louis of Battenberg, who is very much in nature and in habit like the Americans now entertaining him.

But it is announced that a feature of the festivities attending the arrival of this parasite prince is to be a series of prize fights among enlisted men in the United States and English navies, the first of which took place last night.

It is true that in the mind of almost every man there is a certain amount of brutality which causes him to feel interest in a fight with a man from another nation or another tribe.

The ordinary man, when he allows the animal to rule within him, feels like the rooster who sees a neighboring gamecock approaching, or the ram who lowers his head to meet an enemy from the next field, or the savage who takes the scalping knife and rips off the skin from the head of an enemy.

But are the people of the United States quietly and deliberately going to tolerate these organized prize fights on American ships FOR THE AMUSEMENT OF IDLE OFFICERS and "gentlemen"?

Sailor Evans, usually spoken of as "Fighting Bob" Evans, declares that he has got some American sailors whom he will put up to fight the sailors of Prince Louis of Battenberg.

Do the American people like that?

Do they think it a good idea to allow one of the country's employes, advertised as "Fighting Bob," to make OTHER enlisted men fight for his amusement?

No, the people do not like the idea.

They will say to "Fighting Bob" Evans:

"If there is so much fight in you, and if you are so fond of fighting, GO AND FIGHT ON YOUR OWN ACCOUNT."

Tell this prince from Europe THAT YOU WILL FIGHT WITH HIM.

Get up a ring, and put on the gloves, or take your bare fists, and get this prince in the ring with you, and fight with him to your heart's content while the sailors look on.

That would be a stupid performance, but it would be within your rights.

If you WANT to fight, and if the prince wants to fight, well and good.

But what right have you to say that you will take enlisted men of the United States navy and make THEM fight?

There was one of these prize fights the other day on an American ship. A sick man was made to fight against a man in good health. At the end of the fight, one of the men who had amused the "gentlemen" —the sick man—WAS DEAD.

The body of this dead sailor was sent home to his mother, who depended upon him for a living.

The gentlemen had their fun, and then the mother had the pleasure of burying her boy whom she had given to the navy, NOT TO THE PRIZE RING.

Doesn't that "sporting" murder satisfy the gentlemen who organized it?

If it doesn't satisfy them it ought to satisfy President Roosevelt.

Every State in the Union has its laws against prize fighting.

There is an agitation now to punish, as he should be punished, a young man guilty of killing another in a prize fight at Annapolis.

We have reached in this nation at least a certain degree of civilization. We have forbidden the rich to pit dogs against each other.

We have forbidden them to pit dogs against badgers.

We have forbidden them to worry bears or bulls with bulldogs.

Are we going to allow our idle, foolish and conceited men in the navy TO SET AMERICAN AND ENGLISH SAILORS FIGHTING EACH OTHER?

Are we going to allow these men—these so-called "Fighting Bobs" —to pit our hired soldiers or sailors against each other and make them fight?

What does the President of the United States think about this?

He is the commander of the army and navy.

Is he allowing the men of the United States navy to be treated by the officers of the navy as English noblemen used to treat their poor peasants centuries ago?

Isn't there any authority in the United States that will forbid this disgrace to the country?

Or are we still so stupid and dull, so full of veneration for rank and title, that we permit navy officers to set honest men to fighting each other for their amusement and for the amusement of an idiotic foreign prince?

It is all very well for Mr. Roosevelt to shoot his bears and his wildcats, and to shoot anything else that he likes—as long as it has four legs and can't vote.

But he ought certainly to tell the men over whom he has authority in our navy, the officers and "gentlemen," that they have no right to take American sailors to make them fight each other.

MORE THAN MERE SYMPATHY IS NEEDED BY THE JEWS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

What good is the sympathy that the readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN express towards the unfortunate Jews in Russia? Sympathy is all well and good, but the main thing is to help them. Why don't these same people go forth and rescue these poor and suffering human beings? I hope this will stir all people that have any feelings towards huma[illegible]

Solving a Question Settled Long Ago

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory.

THE New York State Conference of Religion is now engaged at Rochester in attempting to settle a question that was definitely settled most admirably about two thousand years ago.

The Rochester Conference is trying to find an answer to the question, "What is religion?" But why should these estimable gentlemen put themselves to so much trouble about a matter that was attended to, and attended to with perfect thoroughness, about twenty centuries ago.

"What is religion?" Is that the question? Then let us turn to the ancient answer, as found in James, i., 27: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

I don't know what the Rochester Conference is going to do, but I don't believe that they are going to do anything better than that.

To save their lives they can't beat it. I shall watch the newspapers carefully for the result of their learned deliberations, but I will say here frankly that I am not looking for any improvement on the definition just given from the New Testament.

Let us look at that old definition for a moment.

In the first place, religion, according to James, is love, kindness, sympathy, the disposition of mind and heart that causes one to be interested in those who are in want or trouble, and that moves him to do what he can to relieve their sorrows.

That is what is meant by visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction—that and nothing else.

In the second place, religion, according to the definition with which we are dealing, is a clean, sweet, wholesome daily life, the high principle, the fine sense of honor and of right which causes one to love the good and scorn the bad, and which inspires one to choose rather to suffer than to degrade himself or become the instrument of degrading others.

These two things, then, a loving heart and a clean life, constitute religion—according to the New Testament itself—and I am free to confess that, while I am in no sense a bibliomaniac, I have never been able to find a truer or grander or more rational definition of the "one thing needful."

Show me the human being whose loving heart beats in real sympathy with all who are in distress, and whose soul cannot rest until all has been done for them that can be done; and, in addition to this, whose daily life is upright and honorable, loving the manly and the right, scornful of the mean and the wrong—show me the human being who combines these two things, and in that human being I will show you the "pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father."

Of course, there are lots of things that are mixed up with religion and that in the minds of a great many people pass for religion that are quite foreign to the main issue.

Mixed up with religion are forms and ceremonies, speculations and dogmas, over which men have argued and quarrelled, fought and butchered one another for centuries, but these things are no more religion than the husk is the wheat or the dress the man.

When the Redeemer of the world was asked the question, "Master, which is the greatest commandment in the law?" He said nothing about forms and ceremonies, nothing about creeds and dogmas, but, confining Himself strictly to the hidden forces of the character, answered:

"Thou shalt Love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

Nothing more is to be said—not even by the worthy gentlemen of the Rochester Conference.

There is nothing so easy but that it becomes difficult when you do it with reluctance. TERENCE.

NOW WHAT D'YE THINK OF THAT?

Major Michael Monohan,
A mining man was he,

He used to load himself with quartz—
He's loaded now, you see.

He took his quartz to foreign ports,
And sold it for a pile,

And now he loads himself with pints—
Oh, every little while!
